

WEST AUSTRALIAN LAND COMPANY LIMITED

The West Australian Land Company Limited was established in London in 1885 to take over a contract for the construction of the Beverley to Albany Railway involving a land grant concession which had been made by the Government of Western Australia the previous year, and to construct and manage 'public works and conveniences' of all kinds in the Colony. The Company was wound up in 1898 and was succeeded by the Great Southern Railway Company of Western Australia.
