

LEY, Azelia Helena (nee Manning)

Azelia Helena Ley was born 27 June 1872. Daughter of Lucius Alexander Manning and Florence Augusta Bickley. On the death of Lucius, her mother married Charles Strode-Hall. Her siblings: Alfred Julian (b.1870), Olivia Davilia (b.1875), Florence Juanita Doverina (b.1878), Victor Louis Calero (b.1883), Lucius Charles (b.1884), Xanthorina Agnes (b.1886). Azelia married John 'Jack' Morgan Ley, 1 September 1900.

'Davilak' was built by her grandfather for her father in 1866. Her grandfather Charles Alexander (arr.1854), Merchant – Fremantle, built Manning's Folly). It was at Davilak that Azelia was born.

'Roraima', 60 Preston Point Road, East Fremantle, originally the house of John 'Jack' Morgan Ley and Azelia Ley (nee Manning) from about 1900 to 1921. The house stood on several acres of land between Fraser and Pier Streets, with a frontage to Preston Point Rd. At the rear of the house stood a coal house with hostlers quarters and stabling for horses.

From about 1934, the property, still owned by Azelia Ley, was rented for 17 years to Dr William and Mrs Alice Muir and their three sons. Dr Muir had his medical practice at 48 Market Street in Fremantle. Alice Muir (nee Mallon), his wife, was associated with the A.B.C. for thirty years as a soprano and toured Australia with the orchestra under a number of famous conductors. Dr William Muir will be remembered by many for his work at Fremantle Port as Quarantine Officer and later at Leeuwin Naval Establishmnet. Soon after the death of Azelia Ley in 1954 the house was demolished.

Azelia Ley lived from 1900 at 'Roraima', 60 Preston Point Rd, (cnr Pier and Frazer ;Street), East Fremantle, following her marriage to Jack and later (probably 1921) moved to Manning Tree House on the Manning Estate, Davilak, Fremantle. Manning Tree House was being built in 1901 and finished in 1921.

Azelia's interest in the movements of ships in Fremantle Harbour would have come from the time she spent at 'Roraima' at East Fremantle. The house was a large 10 room Victorian Building of limestone, iron roof, large verandahs and cellar. Outbuildings included a carriage house (Pier St) for two vehicles, 2 stables and hostlers quarters. A wood shed/wash-house stood on the N.E. corner of the house, not far from the windmill and raised water tank. The whole was surrounded with a pine plantation and later a small cottage was built on Fraser St on the S.E. side of the block. Two large mulberry trees dominated the back yard whilst the northern aspect was given up to a formal garden and shade house with a side gate to Pier Street near where the pomegranate (sic) tree stood. Although the front gate stood on Preston Point Road, the main entrance was from Pier Street where later a motor vehicle garage was erected not far from the large rubber tree (still standing).

In December 1920, Azelia decided to build a new house not far from Davilak. A site to the NW of Manning Lake was chosen and building commenced in December. It is not clear from the diaries whether they moved in before completion in 1923 but the house was named Manning Tree House.

From Azelia's house she could see her lake (marked as swamp on the map), and often had to warn shooters off it. She kept a good house garden – mainly flowers. A hill behind the house gave good views of surrounding land and Fremantle Harbour. Most afternoons she could walk her dogs to the top and report (in her diaries), any movement in Gages Road and the harbour.

One can see from her diaries (1940) that Azelia was not enamoured of Dr Muir (or anyone else who rented 'her' house, although she became his patient. She was particular about 'Roraima' and demanded all interior walls be painted light blue (to deter mosquitoes and flies). When the stables burnt down (c.1950), she sent men to look after the horses (though none had been there for years). At one stage the house was offered for sale to Dr Muir.

Azelia's life revolves around her farm and managing land she owns – share in Davilak House, Beach and High Streets, Rockingham Road, Mt Henry and East Fremantle. It does not appear Jack worked following their marriage, but he was constantly away from home.

Her dogs, horses, chickens, cows and garden occupy her day but she expects a 'drive' in the afternoons either in the buck board sulky or car. These 'drives' take her to Canning Bridge (to see Mt Henry), Rockingham Rd and the ocean, along the River, to old Davilak through Coogee, and out to Point Walter and East Fremantle. Jack is seldom at home – does not join up during the war – often driving to Armadale, Fremantle and Perth by himself and returning home drunk. They had no children and their marriage seemed to have a hiatus in 1901.

Azelia dies not appear to see many friends and meetings with family appear to be mainly for business. Does not like Lucius's wife. Reads quite a lot – lists books and Illustrated London News in diary. Keeps track of world affairs by radio. She rears cattle and fowl on her property and grows crops to support them. As was common in those days, she engaged men on the farm and household help.

Following Jack's death, she continued to run her farm and other extensive properties living well into her eighties at what is now called Azelia Ley House.

This biography was written by Robert Muir, from whom this collection was purchased.
