BA1343/12	/1	Derek Keene	Scenic view Halls Creek Shire	This lovely river scene is of the Black Elvire River, 40 kilometers [sic] from Halls Creek on the Duncan Road. After the wet season is over the river becomes a very popular place for locals as a fishing and swimming facility, and just a few kilometers upstream is the famous Sawtooth Gorge.	1993
BA1343/12	/2	Derek Keene	Halls Creek Police Force	This year was extremely difficult to get all police officers together for the annual photo and in the end I had to be content with just six members of our local force. One consolation was that I was able to take the photo in front of Halls Creek new prison. The officers in this photo are: Terry Dobson 6453 Senior Constable, Trevor Fisher 8384 First Class Constable, Murray Guerin 7510 First Class Constable, Charles Moylan 7009 Senior Constable, Colin Murray 5498 Sergeant, Shayne Williams 143 Police Aide.	1993

BA1343/12	/41	Derek Keene	The dangers of flooded river crossings.	With an elevation of over 400 meters around Halls Creek, the creek crossings in the immediate vicinity of the town are death traps for the unwary and indeed many people have lost their lives trying to cross floodways completely ignorant of the strength of the current. This fully loaded Gascoyne road train was washed off the normally placid Upper Panton River, a river which has a curved cement crossing. The entire roadtrain was swept several meters downstream.	1993
BA1343/12	/42	Derek Keene	The damaged prime mover	The story behind this road train being washed off the Upper Panton River crossing, was that the driver attempted to cross the floodway when the river was down, but was unfortunate enough to become bogged in the piles of loose sand that had built up on the crossing. He was still trying to get the truck free of the sand when fresh flood waters came down, and the whole road train was washed off the crossing.	1993

BA1343/12	/47	Derek Keene	The Bristow helicopters	With the closure of the Great Northern Highway at the Mary River bridge site, transport in and out of Halls Creek came to a virtual standstill. Repairs to bridge and approaches could not be started until the floodwaters receded, but there was still an urgent need to get the road open, and one option was to use the old Mary River crossing lying dormant for nearly ten years. However the crossing also needed to be repaired, and this was all going to take a few weeks. So a short term solution to Halls Creek's food problem was to use the Bristow helicopters to ferry in much needed perishables. This one is being serviced at the airport.	1993
BA1343/12	/48	Malcolm Edwards	Aerial view of Duncan Road and sewerage ponds	Three weeks after the wet season ended all the waters have drained away to be replaced by a carpet of green vegetation. The long stretch of dirt road in the foreground is the same section of road that was under half a meter of water a few weeks before. Top left of the photo are the town's sewerage ponds. The Duncan Road disappears into the hills on the way to the old town.	1993

BA1343/12	/98	Derek Keene	1993 Grand Final Day	After six years in the East Kimberley Football League, the Halls Creek Hawks finally won their very first Premiership under the guidance of astute coach Linsey Greatorex. Lindsey brought welcome new training ideas to the squad and throughout the year he was very tough on the no drinking before a game rule, which he himself introduced. In this photo Lindsey acknowledges his players commitment throughout the year, the club's sponsors and the hundreds of supporters that gathered after the game. A great football moment.	1993

BA1343/12	/128	Derek Keene	Scenic views within Shire of Halls Creek	In 1978 Main Roads had a camp set up near this spot about 15 kilometers south of the old Ord River Station. This erosion gully which I one followed for over three hours and never came to the end of it, is caused by gross overstocking of livestock and there are dozens of these gullies on Ord River Station. It means that hundreds of millions of cubic metres of soil has been washed down the Ord River.	1993

BA1343/12	/133	Derek Keene	Ord River Station Cemetary [sic]	I first discovered this tiny cemetary [sic] on a trip for Main Roads Department back in April 1970. I was very lucky to see it as it is beautifully hidden behind a small ridge only a few metres high, but it is impossible to see from the road. The cemetery is high up on the banks of the Forest Creek well clear of any flood threat. Over the years I have visited this cemetery many times and decided in 1990 that one day when time permitted I would return and restore the old cemetery. It badly needs a new fence and restoration work on the headstones. A month after the station was established in June 1884, a young stockman from South Australia, Andrew Giffney died from fever, and I like to think that he is buried in the old cemetery. The last person buried here was Norman Bourke Welman who had lived and worked the station for over 60 years. He died at the age of 86 in September 1963	1993
