

EWERS, John Keith, 1904-1978

John Keith Ewers, known as 'Keith' or 'JK' to his friends, was born in Subiaco in 1904. He attended Perth Modern School, after which he joined the Education Department, teaching at various country and metropolitan schools, including those in the Wheatbelt, Group Settlements, Nedlands, Spearwood and Perth Boys. In 1947 he left teaching to concentrate on full-time writing, returning later to work part time as editor of technical correspondence courses.

J. K. Ewers began writing while still at school. From 1929 he contributed regular newspaper columns on Australian literature. His fiction includes two books of poetry, five novels, a collection of short stories and a children's book woven around aboriginal legends. Historical studies include the Kalgoorlie pipeline, Perth Boys' School, Bruce Rock and Fremantle. In 1945 he published one of the earliest critical surveys of Australian literature. His book on the North-west, With the Sun on My Back was a joint winner in the Commonwealth Jubilee Competition of 1952.

J. K. Ewers was Foundation President of the Fellowship of Australian Writers (WA) in 1938 with three subsequent terms as President, remaining an active member until just before his death. He gave some of the first lectures on Australian literature at the University of Western Australia, spoke on radio and in public, as well as writing travel articles for magazines, such as Walkabout.

J. K. Ewers was also known to children throughout Western Australia for his English text books. Perhaps more popular were his alter-egos, Diogenes and Inky Wells, during 10 years of the ABC's Argonauts.

In his autobiography, Long Enough for a Joke, published posthumously in 1983, J. K. Ewers gives a vivid account of early life in Subiaco and wheatbelt towns as well as the development of his writing career. John K. Ewers's wife, Jean, was a well known Perth potter.
