

ELISCHER, Julius, 1918-2004

Julius Elischer was born and educated in Budapest. He designed many local civic buildings, churches, schools and retirement villages in Western Australia and had a special interest in low-cost building materials. He invented roofing systems from coils of metal and Styrocon, a lightweight sandwich building panel, used extensively in outback WA. Elischer's buildings reflect his strong belief that responsible architecture should attempt to fit into its built surroundings. Mr Elischer died in February 2004.
